WHAT ABOUT THAT COUGH?

Is It Still Hanging on From Last Winter

Frequently you catch cold during the winter and have a cough. The cold seems to leave you, but the cough hangs on and looks as if it will never leave. You should get rid of this cough, as it may possibly lead into something serious. One of the first signs of consumption is a cough, and for this reason alone, if for no other, you should stop it at once. And you can use nothing that will stop it as quickly as Lung-Vita. Got a bottle from your druggist and start taking it—you will be surprised at the quick results.—Adv.

FISHING MY DEARS!

A fishing party has a charm all its own. Either it is deliciously delightful or it is deliciously dull. In order to be enjoyable there must be a good story-teller in the party. The Lady and her Daughter had all this in mind when they selected their party. It was therefore quite disconcerting when the car stopped in front of this young grandparent's door, to have her appear on the balcony, with her hair done in balls and her back hair in plaits. Of course balls and plaits are all right but add to them tearful eyes and a general dejected appearance, in a young lady who has received an invitation to a Saturday Afternoon's outing in the country and you know without asking that someone higher up has said "no!"

Of course it is no more than right that grandmothers should demand that their granddaughters be useful as well as ornamental, however, who could be expected to be cheerful, over the prospect of missing a fishing party, for the sole purpose of spending the afternoon with an electric iron. From time immemorial however, people have realized that it is the very best thing and ripping good form to have a friend appear on the balcony, with her hair done in balls and her back hair in plaits. He stayed so long that the daughter got out and went in also. Those of us left in the car were just about thinking of going after them, when out they came. The balls and plaits of the young lady in discussion had given place to a charming arrangement and she wore a smile that would not come off in a addition to a coat of high brown powder which she had not taken the time to rub in.

The addition of the story-telling young lady brought the party up to seven and one half member. A Cadillac Eight is a seven passenger car. It took about three minutes to stow the half member away on a pillow directly over the biggest lunch basket and we were off! As we sped along across the river, beyond Rogers Williams and into the country, we felt like singing, "I don't know where I'm going, but I am on my way." We did not sing however, because we could not remember the tune? Tune is absolutely necessary if you are going to sing. Our first thrill came when we reached a creek which the road instead of bridging, led directly down into. The man at the wheel however, remembering that, he who hesitates is lost, unless strobilation is done according to form, on a waxed floor, plunged right in and we were over and breathing freely again, in a jiffy.

The four girls in the party told tales, teased and grew reminiscent. The two women listened while the man at the wheel paid strict attention to driving. We don't remember that the half member had a word to say. If he was paying any attention to the conversation, after the manner of all small boys, he did not show a sign of listening. We passed a house in which the Daughter declared there were four beds in a room. We attempted to explain how they managed it and immediately found ourselves floundering in deep water.

Arrived at our destination, the car was parked in a convenient place and we cut across the meadows to the fishing hole. We decided to eat lunch first. Hungry fishermen and hungry fish are not a good combination. The table was spread and from the very first it was evident that the hostess had no intention of relying on the fish we caught to keep away hunger. Then too, with a sufficient amount of fried chicken, salad, egg custard, stuffed eggs, bread, pickles, sandwiches and confetti, our patience is strengthened and whether the fish bite or refuse to bite there is cheerful resignation.

While dinner was being spread, the half member of the party disappeared and eventually came to light clothed in decided negligee. Five minutes later he had waded into the creek and gotten out scanty negligee wet. A few minutes afterwards in company with two youths who lived in the neighborhood he had the honor of catching the first fish, a sucker about eight inches long.

There were thousands of fish in that fishing hole about four inches long and hundreds about eight inches long. In the sunlight the silver perch shone like jewels in the clear water. The showmen of the water on the ledges lead the Daughter and her Guest to wade. Now the Daughter, though a young lady, has decided poise and we did not worry about her. We had not known the Guest long enough to reach any opinion about her and we did not have time to decide with ourselves, as to whether she was risking her life or limbs on the slippery rock, before her very small shapely feet flew out from under her and she landed on her side in the water, very much to the detriment of a perfectly laundered midy blouse and white skirt. Every one laughed including the wet miss herself. In a few minutes she and the Daughter disappeared and when they returned the young miss was draped in a scrim curtain while the wet garment hung on a bush to dry. While this was happening to the guest, the Lady decided to wade also and off came shoes and stockings and into the water she went. Her wading was done for the sole pleasure of wading and with our mislaid. Two of the girls did not wade but confined themselves to fishing. Affection alone kept us out of the water. We have a corn on our right little toe, which we were afraid might get loose and come off in the water. We would be grieved to loose it, as we have given us our first high heel shoes at the tender age of sixteen. During the afternoon the Lady saw a big cat about nine inches long, as she was wading she called the story-telling miss, who hastened with hook and line and placed the bait right in front of the catfish who immediately took the liver off the hook, slowly swallowed it and went home to bed. It was nearly sundown and he had merely come out to get his supper. The story telling miss having seen kind enough to feed him he went home to his wife and baby cat fish under the rock.

The man of the party is a good fisherman. After he finished his dinner he fished assiduously and had real good luck. We believe that he would have done better had he not had with him an aggregation of females who could not bait their own hooks. Baiting hooks naturally took a good bit of his time. We stayed on the creek till dark and then wended our way back to the car. On the way home we sang till we reached twelfth avenue north. On fourteenth avenue we left the half member and the largest fish of the string. On Heiman street we left the story telling miss. On Jefferson street we left the longest fishing pole and a minnow while the car took home the other three girls, the Lady and the Man, together with the lunch baskets and the rest of the string of fish.

BAPTIST MINISTERS NAME TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE.

At the Baptist Ministers' Conference Monday morning the matter of arranging for a special Baptist train to run from Nashville to Atlanta, was taken up. It was pointed out at this meeting that there would be several hundred delegates coming through Nashville from points West and North from the states of Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, Kansas and Missouri and that Nashville should entertain these delegates and then rig up a special train to carry them on their journey. In pursuit of this plan the committee, consisting of Revs. J. L. Harding, H. M. Burns, J. B. Ridley, E. W. Hawthorn and H. A. Boyd, was named to arrange for a special train and to also prepare for the entertainment of the visiting delegates. The committee is to meet this week, and it is learned from a member of the committee that one of their first plans will be to arrange to show the visiting delegates the new Theological Seminary and Training School site and buildings. Already an assurance is given out that Dr. D. E. Over and his delegates from Denver, Colo., Revs. J. W. Hulse and J. B. Beckham with their delegates from Kansas City, Mo., Cole with his delegates from Missouri, John H. Frank and his delegation from Louisville, V. S. Smith and his delegates from Owensboro, Ky., M. W. Tyler and A. J. Moore with their delegates from Clarksville, Tenn., Rev. Bowen and his delegates from Springfield, Tenn., have already signified their intention of joining the Nashville delegation. It is not known just what the committee will recommend, but the sentiment thus far of the committee is to have a special train leaving Nashville about ten o'clock Tuesday night, September 4th, arriving in Atlanta Wednesday morning at seven o'clock. September 5th. This train will carry sleepers and day coaches. Nashville is expected to send the largest delegation in the history of the Baptist denomination down to Atlanta, as the interest in the Theological Training School, the B. Y. P. U. work, the Women's Auxiliary, the Home and Foreign Mission work, has been kept alive. It was also recalled that at the Sunday School Congress all these Boards held special meetings, and many of the Baptist brethren were urged to make Nashville the gateway to Atlanta in September.
